Protecting a Grand Old Lady

Massey Grandstand in Papakura, Auckland, had been a target for graffiti artists and arsonists for a long period of time. In August of 2009, youths used straw to light a fire that nearly destroyed the historic grandstand that was once sited at Eden Park.

The Council rebuilt the burnt grandstand back to its former glory and in conjunction with local community group Safer Papakura, installed a Mosquito Unit high in the rafters.

Since its installation there has been minimal damage to the stand. With the Massey Park complex now in for a total modernisation, the Council has specified that the Mosquito Unit is to be included in all tenders put forward for the construction works. Vandals can be assured that the Mosquito will continue to protect Massey Park.

“ Their installation has eliminated particular part of the school from being considered suitable gathering areas, and so far we are absolutely delighted with their effectiveness. ”

Steve Collins – Whangaparoa School Principal

“ They're cost effective, can run on solar power and, because they are timed to turn on only in unsociable hours, they don't affect other people's enjoyment of public spaces. ”

Const. Simon Brown – New Zealand Police

“ It is part of our Safety in the Park Strategy. It hasn't harmed kids hearing in other places, it's not going to harm them otherwise we wouldn't have put it in. ”

Sandra Hazlehurst – Hastings District Councillor
